
The Justification of the Juvenile Justice System Over Time

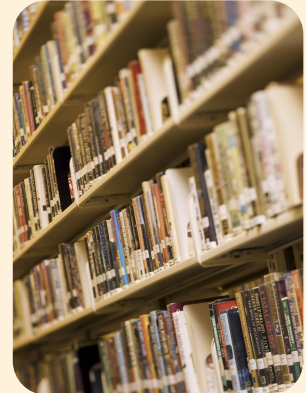

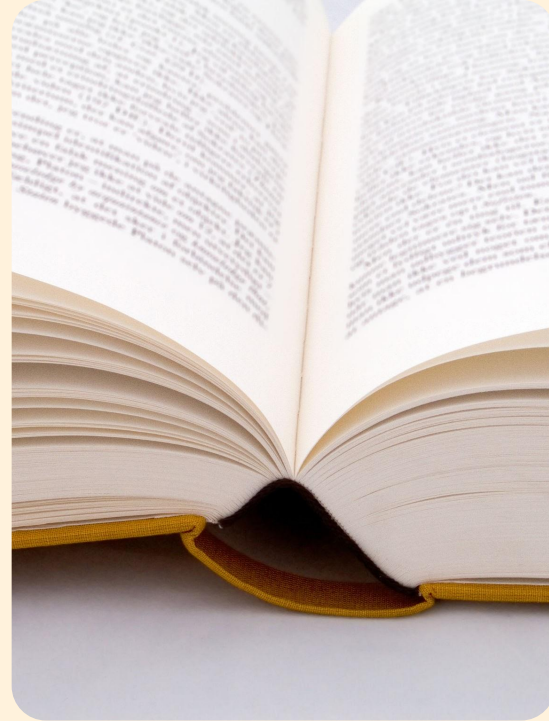

Carina Roberts

Question: How has the justification of the juvenile justice system changed over time?

Answer: This cyclical pattern that goes between a rehabilitative approach and punitive approach reveals the persistence of white supremacy to oppress marginalized youth through racialized policy.

Investigative Methods

- Looking at historical resources
- Creating a timeline of important events to the creation of the juvenile justice system •

What I've learned so far

1700s-1800s

Rehabilitative approach but geared towards white youth

1960s-1970s

Supreme court cases that give more right to youth in juvenile court

1980s-1990s

Racially criminalizing youth and myth of juvenile superpredator

Next Steps

1

Looking at sources that have connected the system to racism

2

Look at why there is a rehabilitative approach in the 2000s